Cover: The four ceramic shards were all found during archaeological excavations at the former village of Blumenhof, about three miles northeast of Steinbach, Manitoba. They represent the range and variety of pots, dishes and cups used by Mennonites in the village from 1875 to about 1904. The pink and gold flowered porcelain shard and the orange and green glazed earthenware piece were likely brought by the Plett family from South Russia in 1875, while the other two “stoneware” pieces may have been purchased in Manitoba.
