

Journal of Mennonite Studies

Volume 9, 1991

Acknowledgments

We are most grateful to the following institutions and firms for their financial assistance toward the printing and distribution costs of this issue of the Journal of Mennonite Studies:

Social Sciences and
Humanities Research Council of Canada
Department of Secretary of State, Multiculturalism
Menno Simons College
The University of Winnipeg

Words of thanks go to Christine Bell of Menno Simons College who looks after the mail and prepares the mailing labels and to colleagues who assist with reading proofs. Typesetting and printing by The University of Winnipeg Printing Services.

Cover: "K. Hildebrandt and Priess," Mennonite manufacturers of farm machinery, established in 1878 in South Russia. In 1903 Kornelius Hildebrandt transferred the management to his children and son-in-law Priess. The factory consisted of two branches, one located in the Chortitza colony and the other, established in 1892, in Schoenwiese (Alexandrovsk). At the beginning of World War I the Chortitza branch employed 80 workers, and the Schoenwiese branch 100, with an annual output value at 500,000 rubles (Menn. Encyclopedia II, 741).